- questions from a member of our research team.
- a demonstration of our product with members of our research team.
- An interactive activity where you use our product similarly to a real-world situation, and you talk about your experience in real time. Members of our research team may observe and ask questions.
- small surveys given to you by members of our research team.

There is little risk to you for testing voting equipment, and we have used great caution to eliminate any risks to you in this study. However, you are still testing a prototype, so you might still face small risks of experiencing physical fatigue, eye strain, touching rough or unfinished parts, and mental frustration.
